

Teacher Chronicles (Branch)

Universe: Brooklyn 99

Protagonist: Rebecca "Becca" Alvarez

Exported: Aug 23, 2026, 6:22 PM

Summary

Set at East Brooklyn High School in Brooklyn, New York.

Transcript

Director: Students file into the classroom and take their seats while a few classmates notice that Rebecca has not arrived yet.

Narrator: Narrator: The fifth-period bell rings down the hallway of East High, its shrill buzz echoing off rows of painted lockers. Ninth-graders stream into Room 204 in the usual uneven tide of dragging backpacks, slouched shoulders, and lingering hallway conversations.

Marcus: slams a heavy binder down on his desk near the front row. "I'm telling you, it was a clean tackle. The ref just has it out for the junior varsity squad."

Maya: slides into the seat beside him and pulls out a worn paperback book. "You hit him three seconds after the whistle, Marcus. Everyone in the bleachers saw it."

Narrator: Narrator: The room fills up as students claim their usual assigned spots. Desks scrape against linoleum, backpacks unzip with loud rattles, and the familiar ambient noise of thirty freshmen settles into the room. But as the initial rush calms down, the students notice an unfamiliar void at the front of the class.

Jordan: glances up toward the teacher's desk, then turns to look out into the hallway. "Wait a minute. Where's Ms. Alvarez?"

Maya: frowns, leaning over to peer at the empty swivel chair. "She's never not here. Like—literally never. She was standing outside by the front doors at seven-thirty this morning."

Marcus: grins slightly, leaning back in his chair with his hands behind his head. "Maybe she finally gave up on grading our essays. Free period, people."

Jordan: shakes his head, tapping his pencil against his desk. "Ms. Alvarez doesn't do free periods, man. If she was stuck in traffic, she'd probably still find a way to telepathically assign us three chapters of reading."

Narrator: Narrator: On the wooden desk near the blackboard, a half-empty travel mug sits beside a neatly stacked pile of ninth-grade essays and a freshly capped red pen. The door leading out to the main hallway remains open, but the teacher's chair remains completely empty.

Becca: End of Chapter I.

Director: The door opens a few moments later and Rebecca enters. She looks completely normal and explains to the gathered class that she was simply in a meeting about an incident in her previous lesson. No mystery. The entire class exhale, slightly disappointed at no mystery.

Narrator: Narrator: The heavy wooden door swings inward a few moments later, cutting off Marcus mid-sentence. Rebecca steps into Room 204 carrying a manila file folder, looking entirely unbothered and wearing her usual practical teacher flats.

Rebecca: sets the folder down on her desk next to her coffee mug. "All right, settle down, everyone. Open your notebooks to page forty-two. Sorry was a few minutes late—I had to stay behind in the main office to brief Vice Henderson about a small incident in my fourth-period room."

Marcus: slumps dramatically in his seat. "That's it? A quick meeting? Man, we thought you got kidnapped by rival teachers, Ms. Alvarez. Or at least got recruited for a secret operation."

Maya: lets out a quiet breath and turns a page in her paperback. "I told you it wasn't a mystery, Marcus. You just wanted a free period."

Jordan: uncaps his pen and shakes his head with a mild grin. "Yeah, but a secret mission would've meant no essay feedback today."

Rebecca: picks up her red pen with a sharp, amused look across the room. "Nice try, Jordan. Your essays are right here, fully graded and ready to be returned. Now, quiet down and turn to chapter four before I decide to double tonight's reading assignment for the wild speculation."

Narrator: Narrator: A collective sigh ripples through the rows of desks—a mixture of minor disappointment that no high-stakes drama had interrupted their Tuesday afternoon and the familiar comfort of their standard classroom routine. Desks settle, paper rustles, and fifth period officially gets under way.

Director: The class begins reading their assigned book, "Blood Brothers" while Rebecca goes up and down the aisle, quietly helping and talking with all 26 present students, noticing the 3 that are absent as well.

Rebecca: walks to the front blackboard and taps a piece of chalk against the slate. "All right, page forty-two. Blood, chapter four. Silent reading for the next twenty minutes, and I want you taking notes in the margins on how Eddie and Mickey's environments shape their choices. If you run into vocabulary you don't recognize, raise a hand quietly."

Narrator: Narrator: A steady rustle of turning pages and unzipping pencil cases echoes through Room 204 as twenty-six ninth-graders settle into the text. Rebecca steps away from the blackboard and begins her usual circuit down the center aisle, her tread silent on the linoleum as her gaze sweeps across every row.

Rebecca: pauses beside Marcus's desk, leaning down slightly. "Marcus, your eyes have been on that second paragraph for three minutes. What is Mickey's mother trying to avoid talking about right here?"

Marcus: blinks, looking down at his open book before glancing up. "Uh—that she can't afford the new shoes? Or wait—no, she's trying to keep him from going over to the bigger houses on the other side of town."

Rebecca: nods once with a small, sharp approval. "Exactly. Keep that contrast in mind when you get to question three later. Focus on what she's hiding, not just what she says out loud."

Narrator: Narrator: She resumes her walk, weaving between the tightly spaced desks with seasoned familiarity. As she moves toward the windows, her mental roll call ticks off the room's seating layout. Twenty-six heads bowed over paperbacks; three desks sitting vacant. Chloe's spot by the radiator is empty, along with Tyler's chair in the back corner and Devonte's desk in row three. She makes a firm mental note to check Devonte's attendance record with the main office during her prep period, given that this makes his second absence this week.

Jordan: looks up as Rebecca nears his desk, keeping his voice down to a low whisper. "Ms. Alvarez, when the mother talks about superstition here, is she using it literally, or is it more like an excuse?"

Rebecca: slips her hands into her cardigan pockets and leans in closer. "Think about who holds the power in that conversation, Jordan. Is she bringing up bad luck because she genuinely believes it, or because it's an easy way to control Mickey without having to explain the real financial situation?"

Jordan: nods slowly, tapping his pen against his open notebook. "Because she can't tell him the truth about the money. So she uses fear to make him listen."

Rebecca: smiles faintly. "Spot on. Jot that observation in your margin right now before you lose the thought."

Maya: quietly turns a page, glancing up for a brief second as Rebecca passes her row. "Ms. Alvarez, Mickey's dialogue on page forty-five—it reads way faster than Eddie's. Is that intentional?"

Rebecca: pauses, looking down at Maya's copy of the book. "Very intentional, Maya. Notice the short sentences and lack of punctuation. What does that tell you about his energy compared to Willy's?"

Maya: traces the printed lines with her thumb. "He's restless. He doesn't have the same structure or patience."

Rebecca: gives a warm, concise nod. "Precisely. Pay attention to how the writer uses rhythm to show class differences without stating them directly."

Narrator: Narrator: For the remainder of the block, Rebecca glides continuously through the rows, pausing to offer quick, pointed feedback, correct a slumping posture with a light tap on a desk corner, or quietly hand a spare pencil to a student in need. Room 204 settles into a focused, productive quiet, the twenty-six students immersed in their reading while their teacher keeps her steady, watchful pulse over every desk in the room.

Becca: End of Chapter II.

Director: A sudden knock interrupts the silent reading session in Room 204, and the classroom door opens to reveal Jake and Rosa standing in the doorway.

Narrator: Narrator: The comfortable, focused quiet of Room 204 is abruptly broken by three sharp, heavy knocks against the heavy oak classroom door. Before can take two steps from where she stands beside Maya's desk, the handle turns and the door swings open.

Narrator: Two plainclothes figures step into the doorway, immediately cutting through the subdued high school atmosphere. One is a man in a rumpled leather jacket and loosened tie with an NYPD badge hanging from a lanyard around his neck; beside him stands a woman in a fitted black leather coat, her arms crossed and her eyes scanning the classroom with sharp, uncompromising authority.

Jake: adjusts his badge strap with a dramatic flourish and scans the rows of desks. "All right, nobody move! Just kidding, you can totally move—please don't jump out the windows, that would be terrible paperwork for everyone. Is this Rebecca's fifth-period English class? Because if so—boom—you've just been visited by the NYPD."

Rosa: gives Jake a look of profound, silent irritation without moving her head. "Peralta, stop talking. You're making it sound like a raid."

steps forward, her eyes locking onto Rebecca. "Rebecca?"

Rebecca: steps smoothly into the middle aisle, placing herself between the officers and her class while keeping her hand resting lightly on her lesson folder.

Narrator: Narrator: Along the second row, Marcus and Jordan immediately strain in their seats to get a better look at the silver badges, while Maya quietly slips a paper bookmark between the pages of her text.

Marcus: whispers loudly across to Jordan. "I told you! I told you she was involved in something crazy!"

Rosa: flicks a cold, razor-sharp glance toward Marcus that instantly shuts him up. "Back to your book, kid."

turns back to Rebecca, her voice flat and strictly professional. "We need a couple of minutes of your time, Ms. Alvarez. In private."

Director: Rebecca dismisses her class and turns to address Jake and Rosa.

Narrator: Narrator: The tension in Room 204 spikes instantly as twenty-six pairs of eyes lock onto the two badges. Rebecca doesn't flinch under Detective intense gaze, nor does she allow Detective theatrical entrance to undermine her authority.

Rebecca: steps to the front of her desk, sweeping a calm, commanding look across the rows of desks. "All right, everyone. Books closed, pack up your things quietly. Head down to the media center for the remainder of the period and check in with Mr. Lin. I expect chapter four finished and those three margin notes completed by tomorrow morning."

Marcus: hastily zips his backpack, leaning forward with wide eyes. "Wait, for real? Are you getting arrested, Ms. Alvarez?"

Rebecca: gives Marcus a sharp, instant teacher look that cuts off any further debate. "No, Marcus. I am not getting arrested. Now move along, all of you—quietly in the hallways."

Narrator: Narrator: The ninth-graders don't dare push their luck. They gather their notebooks and textbooks in record time, stealing lingering, curious looks at the two detectives as they file past them out into the hallway. The heavy door swings shut behind the last student, cutting off the noise of the corridor and leaving Room 204 entirely quiet.

Rebecca: turns completely to face the two plainclothes officers, crossing her arms with a cool, unbothered posture. "Interrupting an active classroom is a major disruption, officers. Now, mind telling me who you two are and why you're barging into my fifth-period lesson?"

Jake: flashes a bright, overly enthusiastic grin and flips open his leather badge wallet. "Right! Proper introductions. I'm Detective Peralta, and this is my stoic and terrifying partner, Detective Diaz. We're with the Ninety-Ninth. And first of all—incredible classroom management. That death glare you gave the kid in row two? Art. Pure art."

Rosa: gives Jake a silent, side-eye glare before focusing entirely on Rebecca. "Peralta, shut up."

Becca: End of Chapter III.

Becca: Chapter IV.

Director: I glare at both of them, rolling my eyes. "Ok, they're gone. What are you doing? It's been like six weeks, Holt and I agreed that I needed like ten or so, I've barely made contact with Vice Henderson until today. How am I supposed to gather evidence if you're interfering? Don't you trust me, Ro?"

Narrator: Narrator: The wall clock above the whiteboard ticks loudly against the sudden silence of the empty classroom. Outside in the hallway, the faint sound of students walking toward the media center fades away, leaving the three of them isolated in Room 204.

Rosa: takes a step closer, resting one hand casually near her belt. "We trust you, Becca. That's why Holt let you handle this assignment in the first place. But the timeline changed twenty minutes ago, and we didn't have time to send a message through your usual channel."

Jake: nods vigorously, leaning against a front-row student desk. "Exactly! The ten-week plan is dead because Vice Sketchball saw a flag on the district server. If he gets those hard drives out of the building in his briefcase at three o'clock, the paper trail goes cold forever. Boom—gone."

Rosa: looks intently at Rebecca. "You mentioned you finally made contact with Henderson today. How was he acting? Did he give any sign that he's on edge or suspects anything?"

Jake: gestures toward the classroom door. "Or did you notice where he keeps his physical backup files? Because if we have to go in there, Rosa and I need to know what we are walking into before we execute a very cool, very illegal-adjacent distraction."

Director: Rebecca tells them he seemed fine, didn't seem on edge at all. They trust her, knowing how good she is at reading people. She then drops a bomb, that blows the assignment open, in a brilliant way.

Rebecca: unfolds her arms and leans back against her teacher's desk. "He was completely fine. Not a single spike in nervous energy, no hurried movements, no sweat. He gave me his usual smug speech about administrative protocol and went right back to drinking his terrible office coffee. He thinks he's entirely untouchable."

Jake: points an index finger at her with absolute conviction. "See? I told you, Rosa! Becca's lie-detector powers are unmatched. She can spot a plagiarized essay from three rows away and a crooked administrator from three miles away."

Rosa: nods slowly, her posture relaxing just a fraction. "If he thinks he's safe, he's not going to panic or try to destroy the physical trail before three. That gives us time to set a perimeter around the parking lot."

Rebecca: reaches into the manila folder on her desk and slides out a heavy, black encrypted external hard drive. "We don't need a perimeter, Rosa. He thinks he's safe because he assumes his drive is still sitting right next to his mug in his locked office."

Jake: stands frozen for a beat, looking back and forth between the drive in Rebecca's hand and her unbothered expression.

blinks rapidly, his mouth opening slightly. "Wait. Is that—did you—how do you have that?!"

Rebecca: taps the metal casing of the drive with her thumbnail. "When I went into his office for that 'meeting' during fourth period, I brought in a confiscated student device to report. I intentionally dropped a box of heavy metal paperclips across his desk, apologized profusely, and swapped his drive for an identical dead unit from the computer lab while he was bent over picking them up. Everything the precinct needs is right here."

Rosa: a slow, rare smirk spreads across her face. "Becca... that is completely inadmissible without us securing the search warrant first, and utterly badass."

Jake: claps his hands over his mouth in pure joy. "You executed a classic sleight-of-hand heist during school hours? Oh my god, Captain is going to weep actual tears of proud joy!"

Becca: End of Chapter IV.

Becca: Chapter V.

Director: We skip forward by three days, to the 99 briefing room. The squad (Jake, Amy, Rosa, Terry, Holt and Charles) are sat down while Detective Alvarez recaps the undercover assignment, debriefing them.

Narrator: Narrator: Three days later, the morning sun streams through the windows of the Ninety-Ninth briefing room. The large whiteboard at the front of the room is covered with mugshots, structural diagrams of East High, and highlighted financial ledgers detailing Vice embezzlement scheme.

Narrator: Rebecca stands at the podium near the whiteboard with a dry-erase marker in one hand and a steaming mug of black coffee in the other, casually debriefing the assembled squad.

Rebecca: taps the marker cap against the board beside Henderson's mugshot. "Once Squad verified the partition keys on the drive I pulled from Henderson's desk, Judge signed off on the search warrant in under twenty minutes. Internal and the district audit team went in at six hundred hours yesterday."

Jake: leans back in his chair, beaming like a proud parent. "And let the record show, the whole crooked operation collapsed because of a box of spilled paperclips. Cold. Calculated. Beautiful."

Amy: opens her color-coded notebook and nods approvingly. "The paperclip trick was impressive, but the real masterpiece was the chain-of-custody documentation. You logged the drive swap, the room conditions, and the exact timestamps without breaking character for even a second. It's... magnificent."

Charles: nods vigorously while taking a bite of a muffin. "It's like a perfectly baked beef Wellington! Hidden layers, rich discipline, and a stunning execution!"

Terry: folds his arms with a look of deep satisfaction. "Terry loves a clean bust. No collateral damage, no civil suits, and a crooked administrator caught red-handed before lunch."

Holt: stands with his hands clasped behind his back, his expression entirely unreadable. "Detective. Your performance throughout this operation was exemplary. You gathered irrefutable evidence, maintained your undercover cover under pressure, and safely dismantled a major district fraud ring."

pauses, giving a single, subtle nod. "Furthermore, I am told your fifth-period class achieved a nineties-percent average on their Blood essay assignment. Outstanding work on all fronts."

Rebecca: takes a sip from her coffee mug and smiles faintly. "Thank you, Captain. Though did leave strict instructions for the substitute regarding my student emergency snack drawer."

Director: Now the briefing is done, the atmosphere turns more casual. The squad all missed Becca over the last few weeks. They all talk about how Becca's been a cop with them for 5 years now, after leaving her previous job... as a teacher.

Narrator: Narrator: Holt caps his dry-erase marker and steps away from the podium, signaling the formal end of the morning briefing. The rigid posture across the room instantly softens as the squad shifts in their chairs, gathering around Rebecca.

Terry: beams and rests his forearms on the briefing table. "It is good to have you back at your desk, Becca. The bullpen was way too quiet without you the last few weeks."

Jake: swivels his chair around to face her, grinning. "Seriously! Charles tried to take over your morning coffee run once and brought back some kind of oat-milk foam soup that tasted like warm lawn clippings. We were suffering, Alvarez. Suffering!"

Charles: places a hand over his heart in mild defense. "It was an artisanal golden-turmeric matcha, Jake! It opens the heart chakra!"

Amy: smiles warmly at Rebecca. "Honestly, when Holt assigned this undercover op, we all knew you were the only one who could pull it off. Five years on the force and you still slip right back into 'Ms. Alvarez' like you never left."

Rosa: leans back against the wall with her arms crossed, nodding once. "Because she spent almost ten years actually doing it before she came to the Ninety-Ninth. Handling fourteen-year-olds is basically tactical riot control."

Jake: points enthusiastically at Rosa. "Right?! You spent a decade corralling teenagers before becoming a cop five years ago. Vice never stood a chance against tenured teacher instincts!"

Rebecca: takes a sip of her coffee and laughs quietly. "I'll admit, grading twenty-six essays on classic literature brought back some serious memories. But as much as I love teaching, I definitely missed my desk. And actual police work."

Terry: nods warmly. "And we missed our Detective. Welcome home, Becca."

Becca: End of Chapter V.

Becca: Chapter VI.

Director: It's now the evening. Becca and Rosa are at Becca's apartment, cuddling on the couch. There's takeout containers and two glasses of wine on the coffee table. Becca asks Rosa how long until they tell the squad? They've been secretly dating now for like 9 months.

Narrator: Narrator: The soft ambient lamp light casts a warm glow over Becca's living room. On the wooden coffee table sit two empty Thai takeout containers, a pair of wooden chopsticks, and two half-filled glasses of red wine.

Narrator: On the couch, the chaos of the precinct and the undercover assignment feels miles away. Rosa has her arm slung comfortably over the back of the sofa, letting Becca rest against her side in the quiet comfort of the apartment.

Rebecca: rests her head against Rosa's shoulder, swirling her wine glass lightly. "It felt good being back today. Though listening to Jake talk about 'teacher instincts' for twenty minutes almost made me miss Vice Henderson's office."

pauses, looking up at Rosa with a soft smile. "Which got me thinking. It's been almost nine months, Ro. How much longer are we keeping us a secret from the squad?"

Rosa: turns her head slightly, her thumb gently tracing a slow circle on Becca's arm. "I like having this. Just us, without Peralta making a bet on our anniversary or Santiago trying to color-code our relationship milestones in a binder."

takes a small sip of her wine and smiles faintly. "Plus, Charles would definitely cry. A lot. Loudly."

looks down into Becca's eyes, her tone shifting to something steady and genuine. "I'm not hiding you, Becca. I just... like that this space is ours. But if you want to tell them, I'm with you. Whenever you're ready."

Director: Becca nods, understanding it. Her hand slides to Rosa, under her waistband and finds her clit, rubbing soft circles with her index finger and thumb.

Rebecca: nods softly, her gaze holding Rosa's. "I like our quiet space too."

Narrator: Narrator: Rebecca sets her wine glass down on the wooden coffee table before turning back toward Rosa. Her hand slides down comfortably along Rosa's hip, slipping past the waistband of her pants. Her fingers move steadily against warm skin, finding her center and beginning a slow, deliberate rhythm of soft circles.

Rosa: lets out a low, quiet catch in her breath, her eyes fluttering shut for a moment. "Becca..."

Narrator: Narrator: The guarded, watchful tension Rosa carries at the precinct melts away entirely in the soft light of the apartment. She tilts her head back against the couch cushions, her fingers shifting to tangle lightly into Becca's hair as a quiet shiver runs through her.

Rosa: opens her eyes, looking down at Rebecca with a steady, darkened intensity. "You're full of surprises today, Alvarez."

Director: Rebecca pulls her hand out. She grabs Rosa's hand, standing and pulling her towards the bedroom. On the way she teases, telling her it's Rosa's turn to wear the strap-on tonight.

Narrator: Narrator: Rebecca gently draws her hand back, slipping her fingers free as she gives Rosa's thigh a soft final press.

Rebecca: stands up from the couch and wraps her fingers around Rosa's hand, tugging her up firmly.

looks back over her shoulder with a slow, playful smirk as she pulls Rosa down the short hallway toward the bedroom. "Come on. And just so we're clear... it's your turn to wear the strap tonight."

Rosa: lets out a low, rough laugh, rising off the couch without a second of hesitation and following right on her heels.

tightens her grip on Rebecca's hand, a wicked, fond heat gleaming in her dark eyes. "You don't have to tell me twice, Alvarez."

Narrator: Narrator: The bedroom door swings shut behind them, cutting off the soft glow of the living room lamp and leaving the apartment in quiet, private darkness.

Director: In the bedroom, they both strip down. Rosa grabs the strap-on from the bedside drawer, putting it on, feeling the bulb on the one side touching her clit.

Narrator: Narrator: Inside the quiet warmth of the bedroom, Rebecca reaches for the hem of her shirt, pulling it up over her head as Rosa slips off her jacket and unbuttons her jeans. Clothes hit the floor in an unhurried heap beside the bed.

Narrator: Rosa opens the top drawer of the nightstand, reaching inside for the leather harness and attachment. She sits on the edge of the mattress, securing the straps smoothly around her hips until the inner bulb rests firmly against her clit, sending a sharp, grounding burst of sensation through her lower belly.

Rosa: lets out a soft, steady exhale as she pulls the harness snug. "Perfect fit."

Rebecca: crawls up onto the mattress beside her, watching with a slow, admiring smile. "You look incredible, Ro."

Narrator: Narrator: Rebecca leans in, pressing her lips against the crook of Rosa's neck while her hands slide around Rosa's waist, pulling her flush against her side.

Director: Rosa lines it up, sliding it into Rebecca and gently thrusting.

Narrator: Narrator: Rosa shifts over Rebecca on the bed, her hands steady and gentle as she guides herself into position. Moving deliberately, she slides inside with a slow, smooth push, setting a quiet, easy rhythm.

Narrator: Rebecca lets out a soft, breathy sigh, her back arching slightly into the mattress as the full weight of the movement settles into her. Her hands slide up Rosa's bare arms, fingers gripping tightly.

Rebecca: gasping softly as she closes her eyes. "Ro... god, that feels so good."

leans down, pressing her forehead gently against Becca's. "I've got you, Alvarez. Just focus on me."

Rosa: keeps the thrusts steady and rhythmic, her gaze locked onto Becca's face with a fierce, quiet affection. With every slow movement forward, the inner bulb presses flush against Rosa's clit, anchoring both of them in the deep, shared warmth of the moment.

Director: As Rosa goes deeper, the dildo pushing Rebecca closer to the edge, while the bulb works its magic on Rosa herself, Rebecca isn't passive. She's playing with Rosa's nipples, squeezing and stroking them.

Narrator: Narrator: Rosa deepens her thrusts, driving smoothly into Rebecca with a firmer, heavier momentum that sends a continuous shudder through Becca's hips. With every forward movement, the inner bulb presses flush against Rosa's clit, building a sharp, electric friction that locks them into the exact same quickening pace.

Rebecca: reaches up, her hands sliding over Rosa's chest. "Don't hold back, Ro..."

Narrator: Narrator: Becca's hands cup Rosa's breasts, her thumbs and forefingers finding her hardened nipples, squeezing them firmly before rolling and stroking them in deliberate, rhythm-matching circles.

Rosa: lets out a low, ragged gasp, her breath catching hard in her chest. "Becca... fuck."

Narrator: Narrator: The double wave of sensation from the inner bulb and Becca's firm touch pulls a rare, breathless groan from Rosa's throat. She grips the sheets beside Becca's head, her eyes dark and completely focused as her hips drive faster, burying herself deep inside Becca with every stroke.

Rebecca: arches up off the mattress, her fingers pinching softly as her hips meet Rosa's pace. "Right there... god, Rosa, yes!"

Director: They keep going, Rosa pushing deeper and deeper until... at the exact same moment they both come. Completely undone.

Narrator: Narrator: The air in the bedroom grows thick with heat and shallow, frantic breaths. Rosa pushes in deeper with a fast, relentless rhythm, the friction of the inner bulb driving against her clit until the pressure turns agonizingly sharp. Below her, Becca pulls Rosa down flush against her, her fingers squeezing and rolling Rosa's chest with matching intensity, driving them both straight past the point of no return.

Rebecca: clings tightly to Rosa's bare shoulders, her thighs wrapping around Rosa's waist. "Rosa—I'm right there—don't stop, god, don't stop—"

Rosa: buries her face in the curve of Becca's neck, her body shuddering with intense effort. "I've got you, Becca... right now—!"

Narrator: Narrator: With one final, deep push, the tension shatters. The peak crashes over them at the exact same instant, completely undoing them both. Becca arches wildly off the mattress with a breathless cry, her inner muscles clenching tight, while Rosa lets out a low, guttural groan against Becca's skin as her own orgasm hits, her hips trembling as the intense waves ripple through her entire body.

Narrator: The room falls into a quiet hush, saved only by the heavy sound of their breathing and the soft rustle of the sheets. Rosa slowly collapses forward, resting her forehead against Becca's collarbone while Becca's arms wrap securely around her back, holding her close in the lingering warmth of the afterglow.

Becca: End of Chapter VI.

Becca: Chapter VII.

Director: It's a few minutes later. Rosa and Becca have cleaned themselves up, removed the strap and now are just snuggling and talking.

Narrator: Narrator: A few minutes pass in peaceful quiet. The harness has been wiped down and stowed back in the nightstand drawer, and the bed covers have been pulled up against the slight chill in the room. Tangled together under the soft duvet, the room is still and quiet.

Rebecca: rests her head against Rosa's bare shoulder, her fingers tracing light, absentminded patterns over Rosa's ribs. "That was incredible, Ro. I honestly don't think I'm going to move for the rest of the night."

Rosa: turns her head slightly, pressing a soft, lingering kiss to the top of Becca's head. "Good. Because I'm definitely not carrying you anywhere."

Narrator: Narrator: Rosa's arm wraps securely around Becca's waist, pulling her flush against her side until there is no space left between them. The sharp, guarded armor Rosa wears every day at the Ninety-Ninth precinct is completely absent here, replaced by a quiet, steady warmth.

Rosa: quietly, her voice low in the dark. "You did great on that undercover op, Becca. I know you missed being back in a school, but... I was worried about you the whole time you were in there."

Rebecca: softens, shifting up slightly to look into Rosa's dark, open gaze. "I know you were. But the case is closed, the ring is busted, and I'm right here. Safe, sound, and completely yours."

Rosa: a faint, genuine smile touching her lips. "Damn right you are."

Continue: Continue

Narrator: Narrator: The city outside the window hums with distant traffic, but inside the bedroom, the heavy curtains block out the bright streetlights of Brooklyn. Becca shifts slightly, resting her chin on Rosa's chest and looking up at her.

Rebecca: smiles softly, tugging the edge of the blanket a little higher over Rosa's back. "You know... Captain Holt actually asked me today if I was feeling well rested after the assignment wrapped up. I told him I was feeling 'unusually efficient.' I think he almost smiled."

Rosa: lets out a short, quiet snort, her dark eyes softening. "He definitely didn't smile. That was probably just a severe allergic reaction to enthusiasm."

Becca: laughs softly, the gentle rumble vibrating against Rosa's chest. She settles deeper against Rosa's side, feeling completely at ease.

Rebecca: grins, stroking her thumb gently over Rosa's hip. "Maybe. But it's good to be back at my desk in the bullpen. Even if Jake immediately tried to make me evaluate a dozen high school slang terms he found online."

Rosa: rolls her eyes fondly, her fingers tangling gently in Becca's dark hair. "He asked me yesterday if 'no cap' meant someone wasn't wearing a hat. I told him it meant he should stop talking. He believed me for about two hours."

Narrator: Narrator: A comfortable silence settles over the bedroom once more. The room is warm, the lingering tension of the past few weeks finally dissolved into quiet security. Rosa's thumb moves in slow, comforting circles against Becca's waist.

Rosa: lowers her voice, speaking softly into the dim light. "Seriously though... whenever you're ready to stop keeping us a secret from the precinct... just say the word. I'm ready whenever you are."

Rebecca: kisses the underside of Rosa's jaw, lingering there with a warm, steady pressure. "I know, Ro. Soon. But tonight... I really like that it's just ours."

Rosa: pulls her closer, resting her cheek against Becca's forehead as their breathing slows in unison, settling comfortably into the quiet dark.

Director: "Ro..."

Rosa: hums softly in response, her dark eyes shifting down to meet Becca's gaze in the warm, dim ambient light of the room. She loosens her grip slightly, letting her hand move up to gently brush a stray strand of dark hair away from Becca's forehead.

keeps her voice low and steady. "Yeah?"

There: is no rush in the quiet bedroom, no cold precinct cases or squad room noise waiting for them. Rosa waits patiently, her thumb continuing its slow, rhythmic stroke against Becca's hip, completely attuned to the softer tone in Becca's voice.

Rosa: traces the line of Becca's jawline with her fingers. "What's on your mind? You thinking about the school case, or something else?"

pauses, a gentle, quiet affection resting in her dark eyes as she stays wrapped around Becca, giving her all the time and space she needs to say whatever is on her mind.

Director: "I've been thinking, about the future. About us. Nine months I know isn't exactly a long time, but... well, I love you." I admit. "I've been thinking about marriage, maybe even kids. What do you think? Sorry, I know it's like..." Rosa cuts me off, laughing.

Narrator: Narrator: Rosa lets out a soft, surprised laugh—a rare, full sound that vibrates against the quiet of the bedroom—and cups Becca's cheek, gently cutting off her quiet spiraling.

Rosa: laughs softly, shaking her head before pressing a warm kiss to Becca's forehead. "Breathe, Alvarez. Stop rambling."

pulls back just enough to look Becca directly in the eyes. The teasing smile lingers on her lips, but the expression in her dark eyes softens completely, glowing with an affectionate sincerity.

stroking Becca's cheek gently with her thumb. "First of all... I love you too. You don't ever have to apologize for saying that."

Narrator: Narrator: She lets the weight of those words settle between them in the dark room. It is not something Rosa says often or easily, but here, wrapped up together in the warmth of Becca's bed, there is zero hesitation in her voice.

Rosa: grins, her eyes sparkling with fond amusement. "Second of all... marriage and kids? Damn, teacher. You really don't do anything half-assed, do you?"

shifts slightly, propping herself up on one elbow to look down at Becca, her dark curls falling around her shoulders in the quiet twilight of the bedroom.

lowers her voice, speaking with absolute honesty. "I used to think that kind of future wasn't in the cards for me. With anyone else? I'd be out the window. But with you... I'm not scared of it. I want whatever future we build together, Becca. Rings, kids, terrifying teenagers—all of it. When the time is right."

Becca: End of Chapter VII.
